

TRADITIONAL ASPECT

"When designing this kitchen, traditional design was a very important aspect to the homeowners. It was also essential, due to the size of the room, that the kitchen have a grand presence. The massive island allows plenty of space for food prep while leaving enough room for walkways between the island and the counter. This helps in creating the bold reaction associated with this kitchen. The pantry is hidden using a hand-painted sliding door, while storage space is maximised throughout the kitchen with plenty of drawers. The rangehood area is cleverly concealed and topped with a mantel shelf, adding to the traditional design of the kitchen. The island utilises a marble benchtop that not only allocates room for food preparation, but also seating for two."
